"WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME" AT ELKS THEATRE TONIGHT

The Play Lacks Characteristics of the Melodrama Thriller But is Full of Dramatic Situations.

"Why Girls Leave Home" Manager Matson's offering at the Elks theatre on Tuesday Feb. 16 is said to be a play that is admirably constructed, having very little of the bombastic so characteristic of the melodramatic style. There is a welcome lack of stage machinery, and in place of these E. J. Carpenter the owner, has invested his capital in adequate stage settings.

The story tells of a wilful young girl who innocently got into bad company, but her brother, also a headstrong person, sought to advise her by angry speech. Nettled by his attitude the girl gets deeper into the clutches of a designing wanton. The brother in a frenzy strikes her and thinks he has caused her death, when in reality she has been carried away by his enemies in order that he might be hanged for the crime; fatal results seem imminent, when by a fortunate combination of circumstances, all danger is averted. A cast of players of unusual excellence is promised in the production of the piece.
